

Every Person Can Tell You Something about Yourself: Aesthetic Realism Shows How!

Thursday ◆ March 24 ◆ 10:30 AM

This is an exciting presentation by Aesthetic Realism consultants Anne Fielding and Jeffrey Carduner. Men and women are going to learn what Aesthetic Realism, the philosophy founded by Eli Siegel, the great American poet and critic, explains: the most urgent need for every person is to like the world on an honest basis. And this lively presentation shows how we can, including how we can honestly care for other people!

Portrait of Dora Maar by Pablo Picasso

Ms. Fielding and Mr. Carduner are popular speakers in the NYC metropolitan area, and at centers and senior living communities in many other states.

Using Picasso's painting of Dora Maar, they speak of what Aesthetic Realism shows: there is a fight in each of us between the desire to care for things, see new possibilities in others, and the desire to have contempt, "the addition to self through the lessening of something else."

People will be invigorated as they see other people in a way that's fair and really kind, based on the principle stated by Mr. Siegel "The world, art, and self explain each other: each is the aesthetic oneness of opposites."
